MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE DISNEY CHANNEL

Dear Reader,

A year ago, we used this space to note our first anniversary and thank the cable operators and subscribers who made it all possible.

We didn't know then that our second year would bring even more excitement than the first:

- Overwhelming response to our new programming, like "Five Mile Creek," "Tiger Town," "Love Leads the Way" and "Still the Beaver."

- The highest viewer tune-in and subscriber satisfaction ratings in the industry.

- More new subscribers than any other pay television service.

With nearly two million subscribers, our Disney Channel family is growing. And, as Linda Palmer can attest, it is a vocal family.

Each week, our managers (in all departments) get a detailed analysis of subscriber mail. That input, along with ongoing subscriber research, keeps us in tune with our audience.

Your feedback helps us decide what programs should be on the Channel. As an example, we have had many requests for the classic animated features. So this summer we will show, in consecutive months, "Alice in Wonderland" and world television premieres of "Robin Hood" and "The Sword in the Stone."

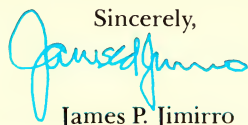

We're planning to surround these events with lots of fun—in the Magazine, on the air, and in your home.

For our early morning viewers we've developed a delightful cast of new characters. They'll be starring in "Dumbo's Circus," beginning next month.

Our prime-time schedule will include these new productions: "Return to Treasure Island," a 10-hour mini-series filmed in England, Spain and Jamaica; "Parent Trap II," starring Hayley Mills; "Blue Yonder," a fantasy adventure; and "Danger Bay," an adventure series.

Those are just a few of the highlights, a small sample of what lies ahead. So we hope you'll be with us to make new discoveries, rekindle fond memories, and share time with friends and family.

Sincerely,

James P. Jimirro

HIGH ADVENTURE IN

The story behind "Never Cry Wolf" involves one of the strangest, most arduous, and downright dangerous shoots ever undertaken for a motion picture.

"I was warned," says Charles Martin Smith, who stars in the spectacular wilderness adventure.

"The director (Carroll Ballard) said it would be the worst shoot I'd ever be on. He tried to talk me out of it. There were many times in the following months when I wished he had."

observing the nature and behavior of wolves. To do so, he attempts to live like a wolf. His saga begins when he is left alone in a frozen clearing. Smith's own arrival at the film's location within the Arctic Circle was almost as disconcerting.

"After we'd been flying for 12 hours, a bush pilot dropped me off in the middle of nowhere," Smith says. "The only evidence of civilization was the tiny dirt airstrip we landed on. A truck was waiting, and I got in. Ten minutes along a dirt road, we had to stop for a grizzly bear that was blocking the way. He looked us over, scratched himself, casually wandered off, and we continued on. We drove for another hour and finally came across a little van in the road, with a camera on a tripod and everybody bundled in parkas, huddled together. Carroll Ballard walked up, said 'Hi, we've been waiting for you,' and immediately put me to work shooting a scene that took five hours to film."

For the next few weeks Smith worked in zero temperature and a 40 mph wind. The crew wore cold weather gear. Wearing what he had been issued for his role—parka, flannel shirt, pants and boots—Smith was filmed falling through thin ice covering a frozen lake.

"The cold was bad enough but it was the claustrophobia, the desperation of trying to find some way to get out, that got me," he says. "My parka weighed a ton. It dragged me down, all I could see was ice above me, and I thought I was going to die trying to climb out of there. When I finally managed to struggle out, exhausted, coughing and gasping, Carroll Ballard came over from behind the camera and said, 'Charlie, you played that scene well.'"

Smith thought things were improving

"The director said it would be the worst shoot I'd ever be on. He tried to talk me out of it. There were many times in the following months when I wished he had."

when he was given a wet suit to wear under his clothing for the scene in which he pitches a tent beside the lake after breaking through the ice.

"I should have known better," he says. "The scene takes place in a raging wind and rain storm. I had to hike a mile to get to the location. Once there I was thoroughly soaked in the gale they created by pumping half-frozen slush from a pond into high-powered wind machines. Mr. Ballard, however, came through. He gave me a blanket to throw over my shoulders between shots."

And then, of course, there were the wolves.

"The wolves we used in the picture

were trained," Smith says, "but they weren't that trained. I had a number of face-to-face confrontations with them, but the edgiest was totally unexpected. It was a scene where a wolf was to sniff around outside the flap of my tent. The wolf hadn't read the script. Instead, he ripped through the canvas as if it were paper, and came in behind me. I sat very still, afraid that he would panic and start biting. I said, 'Carroll, he's in the tent.' Carroll said, 'I know. Don't move. It's a great shot.'"

To Smith's relief, the wolf snatched a sock as a prize and ran off with that.

Originally, "Never Cry Wolf" called for four months of location shooting and one month of post-production work. As it turned out, Smith spent 18 months in the Arctic and an additional 18 months

"The wolf hadn't read the script. Instead, he ripped through the canvas as if it were paper, and came in behind me."

working with Carroll Ballard and others on post-production. Two months alone were spent filming the spectacular caribou stampede that climaxes the picture.

"It's only a 10-minute sequence, but we shot 12 hours a day to get it," Smith says. "We fought the weather. Up there it changes fast. In May, the Bering Sea has pack ice. It looks like the North Pole. A month later, the sun goes up high and stays up. In between, you catch all the storms that blow in off the Gulf of Alaska."

"Besides racing the weather, we raced time. We had three weeks to film the caribou before they were driven to Nome for dehorning. We also had to shoot the wolves chasing them, and last but not least me—running naked among them."

"I would crouch in the bushes, they'd get the caribou started and pop the wolves out of their cages, there'd be total chaos for about 20 seconds, and then the caribou would be gone, and I'd sit down and wait. In about two hours they'd be back in position, and we'd do it again. We did this every night, from six p.m. until six in the morning, until we had enough little pieces to get the caribou footage. Then we filled in with running shots of the wolves and me."

For six months after Smith completed his acting stint in "Never Cry Wolf," he functioned as a co-writer on the script. Then he and Ballard spent 12 months more honing the 3½-hour film down to its present 105 minutes running time. Having invested three years of his career on an exhausting enterprise with more than its share of difficulties and danger, Smith was asked if the ordeal was worth it. He points to a stack of film critics' reviews.

HOW YOUR CHILD CAN WIN WITH SPORTS

The heat's on. Chris is at the plate. Two outs and the bases are loaded. Hecklers chant louder and louder, "Hey batter, batter. Swing!" Strike one. Dad's in the bleachers, screaming above the crowd's roar. Chris wipes the perspiration from sweaty palms and clutches the bat again. The umpire cries, "Strike two!" Chris's coach comes onto the field and yells at the umpire. Before going back to the dugout, the coach slaps Chris on the back. "Don't let us down." Chris's stomach is churning now. Chris swallows hard as the pitcher throws the ball. Everything seems to go in slow motion.

"How can we help keep fun in the games our children play?"

This is Chris's big chance to prove to everyone that the kid is worth something. The wind whips past. Chris strangles the bat at the words, "You're out!"

Are we stealing childhood away from children by making them little adults—gearing them to competitive pressures and a stressful atmosphere on the playing field? How can we help keep fun in the games our children play?

Opening game baseballs will be tossed into Little League playing fields and stadiums across the country this month. In the spirit of the game, we at The Disney Channel are pitching you three programs that could give insight into the sport. "Still the Beaver's" "Haskells vs. Cleavers" segment has Kip's team going against another that will stop at nothing to win; "The Edison Twins" finds the continuation of a women's baseball league dependent upon Annie winning the prize for the best sports editorial in a local radio contest in "Bases Loaded—One Girl Out"; and the award-winning "Tiger Town" pits superstition against years of hard work to realize the dream of winning a pennant and a world series.

All three are fascinating fare for the avid fan. What if one of those fans happens to be your child? And what if that child just happens to try out for a team this season? What should you, as a parent, be aware of?

We asked some experts those very questions.

"When competitiveness and winning become the primary focuses, then a sport stops being a game and loses its fun quality," says Dr. Terry L. Hanson, a clinical psychologist specializing in work with children and families.

Dr. Hanson talks about some possible emotional dangers. "A child could concentrate so hard on the sport that he or she might exclude human relationships. The child could become so involved in a game, investing energy and becoming aggressive, that he then relates to people in the same aggressive and competitive way. The kids who aren't up to par are left out. Are they emotionally mature enough to deal with the sarcasm, belit-

"At their best, organized sports are fun, good exercise and let children learn."

ting and threat to their self-worth? It's also damaging to children who are good at a sport but over-value being the best and don't sample a lot of other activities and interests at a time when they need to."

In counteracting these potential negatives, trainers and authority figures play a major role.

Berma Gallaher, a district administrator for Little League baseball in Southern California, sees first hand the influence of parents and coaches on the children.

"We're not out to make professional ball players. Instead we're helping these

Organized sports can build confidence and self-esteem—or they can have a negative effect on your kid's emotional well-being kids get along with their peers," he says.

Gallaher is adamant about the parents' role in organized sports. "The parents should just stay out of the game and give the same love at home whether the child wins or loses. The best teams I've seen having the most fun had their parents there to give moral support to all of the kids."

He sees so many of the parents use the sport as a babysitter: dropping their children off, picking them up and not fully understanding the game. Yet on the rare occasions they do show up, they become furious with the coaches over their child's performance or what they consider a bad call by the umpire. "Because of this, the coach gets a bum rap and it shows the child lack of respect for authority figures."

Gallaher says that there are never enough trained coaches for the amount of kids. For those who do coach, the primary prerequisite is a love for those kids.

The Little League is one organization that supplies literature to instruct its coaches beyond the rules—to recognize the power they have to help the children. Its guidelines suggest being liberal with praise and sparing of criticism, surrounding criticism with positive comments and teaching by example.

Parents can best contribute their moral support and sometimes act as assistant coaches. And parents, beware. According to Dr. Hanson, a parent should be casual and detached about the sport. "If you find yourself losing sleep over a win or loss, then you are probably exerting too much pressure on your child and must evaluate whether the child is playing because he or she wants to, or because you want the child to."

But children, at some time in their lives, need to get involved, and the many organized sports are vehicles for both a physical outlet and emotional growth.

"At their best, organized sports are fun, good exercise and let children learn the steps it takes to get good at something. This results in self-esteem, and prepares them to better deal with the turmoil of adolescence," Dr. Hanson continues. He adds that organized sports help a child follow through, work with people, and build friendships. Sports activities can become family affairs, especially for the father, who has a chance to give of himself and shape the interests of his child.

As Dr. Hanson concludes, the playing field is a powerful laboratory where potential values can far outweigh the dangers—with your help. ♡

Perri

A True-Life Fantasy Starring Nature's Woodland Dwellers

When Walt Disney decided to use real animals in their natural environment to create "Perri," a "True-Life Fantasy" about the life of a young western pine squirrel, he set a movie-making precedent.

Telling a story with animation—where characters and their behavior can be drawn and controlled with the stroke of a pen—is one thing. Starting with a fictional idea, then depending on nature to supply the necessary animals and actions is another. Allowing nature to act as their co-writer/director had its challenges—as Walt and everyone involved with "Perri" soon discovered.

The first was finding the right actors to portray Perri and her companion, Porro. Six expert wildlife photographers scouted the remote wilds of northern Utah for weeks until they discovered the perfect couple.

For over two years the men would remain in that area, living in a tent camp half a day's rough ride by truck and jeep from the nearest town.

The villain, a ravenous marten, was even more difficult to cast. His role was well-defined, but tracking down his hunting areas and strategies proved nearly impossible—even with the use of long-range telephoto lenses.

Supporting roles were played by the other forest inhabitants. Constant vigilance was required to record these unwitting actors' habits and life-cycles. Only one out of every 10 feet of exposed film proved usable. Before they finished, the lensmen had chalked up over 300,000 feet (about 60 miles) of celluloid.

But simply being on hand wasn't all it took. Getting the footage often proved hazardous, testing the photographers' fortitude and courage.

Perri seemed to knowingly dare the men to follow her across the forest treetops. Cameras had to be laboriously hoisted as much as 50 feet above ground. Climbing irons were new to many of the lensmen, and makeshift platforms high in the branches proved wobbly and dangerous. One photographer fell from a tree. Another was savagely attacked by a goshawk as he filmed her fledglings. He lost his shirt and gained a set of talon stripes for his efforts. Everyone nursed strained muscles and barked shins.

Ground level work, while not as risky, could be just as frustrating. One eager young beaver came every morning to drag away the saplings which the photographers cut every evening for their brush blinds.

Although the men were careful not to invade the animals' privacy, the animals themselves had no such scruples. Within days, the camp was fearlessly overrun by visitors.

Ravens, magpies and chipmunks boldly raided larders, hampered camera setups and snatched food from the hands of hungry diners. A mother raccoon arrived daily for breakfast, never ceasing to be surprised when the lump sugar she dipped in unattended coffee cups melted between her paws. Foxes and wildcats searched for scraps. One photographer was banished downwind from camp by his mates following a surprise meeting with a skunk.

Through it all were long trying hours of just waiting. The animals couldn't be hurried or prompted to act their parts. Only knowledge and observation told the men when to prepare for an event that might—or might not—occur.

"We were especially anxious to catch the moment when Perri and Porro decided to mate," recalled Winston Hibler, the film's director and narrator. "We weren't sure when—or if—it would happen until the morning when Porro permitted Perri to cross the boundaries of his private food reserve. Subtle signals like that were all we had to go on."

Chance played a part in the production too. The dramatic forest fire sequence, totally unforeseen, was filmed when a lightning bolt exploded a great tree nearby. The photographers rushed to help Rangers check the inferno, then hurried back to their cameras in time to catch bedraggled refugees arriving at the local beaver pond.

"We started with a rough idea of what we wanted," Hibler said. "But when we worked with the animals, they began to deliver a far better script than anything we could have written. Nature was our collaborator always." ♡

While Five Mile Charlie Withers can be a stern banker, smiling suitor, or coachsick pioneer, actor Peter Carroll is his own man!

FOCUS ON PETER CARROLL

FIVE MILE CREEK'S FUSSBUDGET PIONEER

We receive many letters from you "Five Mile Creek" fans asking about the actor behind Charlie Withers' muttonchop whiskers. You're especially curious because of his transformation this third season: the stiff and stuffy bank manager has changed into an almost adventurous Australian pioneer! Which of these is the real Peter Carroll, who enacts Charlie Withers?

Actually, Carroll shares few traits with either his "old" or "new" character. While on vacation in the States, the sandy-haired actor visited The Disney Channel offices and proved to be the picture of relaxed charm, with attractive laugh lines and a ready smile replacing Charlie's customary frown.

"All actors believe in this basic rule: if you're really acting, you can't get hurt!"

"No, I'm not Charlie Withers, but I find it easy to play the part of an English emigrant to Australia," Carroll says in cultured tones that sound more British than Australian. "I trained in London (at the London Central School of Speech and Drama), and I loved knowing the English. They really are sticklers for discipline—just like Charlie."

A native Australian, Carroll also understands the spirit of the men and women who pioneered his homeland.

"My grandfather was one of them," he says, with evident pride. "He was a shipwright who regularly rowed 50 miles up Sydney Head to Hawkesberry River for supplies."

But while Carroll sympathizes with his character's psychology, he emphasizes the differences in their lives. Unlike the bachelor Withers, Carroll is married and has a five-year-old daughter, Tamsin, whose presence during his vacation to the States required lengthy visits to Disneyland. "We were in Fantasyland for over four hours yesterday," Carroll confides somewhat sheepishly.

And there is yet another serious distinction between the actor and his character: "I've never worked in a bank!" he laughs, and lounges back in his chair.

Indeed, Carroll's long and distinguished acting career left him no time for other sorts of work. With over 20 years experience in the theater, he has appeared in roles ranging from Dr. Dorn in "The Sea Gull," to Benedick in "Much Ado About Nothing," and Peron in "Evita." His film work includes "The Last Wave" and "The Chant of Jimmy Blacksmith," both of which were highly acclaimed by U.S. critics when shown in this country.

The Withers role was attractive to Carroll because he wanted to work in a continuing series. "There's a different feeling in a series than in a film or stage play because the material is always changing. I like it that my character is pushed in different directions. And I like how Charlie is developing.

"When we started, Charlie was what we call a 'new chum,'" Carroll recalls. Straightening up in his chair and assuming a pinched expression, he instantly evokes the fussy bank manager of the early episodes. "He had the English ways of looking at things, he was fastidious about the niceties of life.

"The English really are sticklers for discipline and punctuality—just like Charles!"

"Now something of Australia has rubbed off on him. He's more human, more relaxed and adventurous." Carroll pauses, and adds with a rueful smile, "Mind you, he still gets coach sick!"

A tendency to coach sickness is one of the few characteristics Carroll shares with his character. In fact, he's not totally pleased that the "new" Withers now has to ride horses and drive a stage coach for the first time!

"But our wranglers are very good, and I do exactly what they tell me," he says. Then he adds, with a mischievous gleam in his eye, "Besides, all actors believe in this basic rule: no matter what you have to do for a scene, if you're really acting you can't get hurt!" 🐾

NEVER CRY WOLF

Movie starring
Charles Martin Smith, Brian Dennehy

Charles Martin Smith as a field biologist begins his isolated study of Arctic wolves Carroll Ballard's unanimously acclaimed "Never Cry Wolf" is a story of survival. More, it's the true story of a man who chose to challenge modern civilization by living among wild Arctic wolves.

Tyler (Charles Martin Smith), a young government biologist, agrees to spend a season isolated in the icy wastes of Northern Canada in order to gather proof that wolves are responsible for ravaging herds of caribou.

His supplies and makeshift camp are woefully inadequate against the threat of weather and wolf packs. He notes of an adult white wolf: "I'm supposed to watch his behavior, but all he does is watch mine..."

As weeks pass and his understanding of the wolves deepens, Tyler's perception of man versus animal changes profoundly. He learns to live among them in guarded coexistence. He even alters his diet to match theirs. Inevitably, he is drawn into a series of strange, often terrifying situations that will shape the course of his life after he leaves the wilderness—if he can. Justin Henry brings luck

We are pleased to report that "Tiger Town," our first full-length made-for-The Disney Channel movie, won the National Cable Television Association's Award for Cable Excellence (ACE) for Best Dramatic Feature Film of 1984. In recognition of this honor, and to welcome the start of a great new baseball season, we bring you a special encore performance of our award-winning motion picture. Enjoy!

Billy Young (Roy Scheider), 39, is ending a brilliant career with the Detroit Tigers. But he never won a pennant, and it seems unlikely that he ever will.

Twelve-year-old Alex (Justin Henry) is a Tiger fan who idolizes Young. During one discouraging game, Alex concentrates with all his might on the aging player. Miraculously, Young hits a homer.

Now, whenever Alex is in the stands, Young delivers. But when the boy is absent, Young's winning streak vanishes. In the last inning of the pennant game, the Tigers need three runs to win. Young steps up to bat—and Alex isn't around. You'll gasp at the outcome of this breathtaking baseball thriller. (76 min.)

TRUE STORY OF AN OLYMPIC CHAMPION

R U N N I N G Brave

Movie starring Robby Benson, Pat Hingle, Claudia Cron, Jeff McCracken

Your approval of movies like "Amy," "Love Leads the Way," and "With a Song in My Heart" shows us how much you enjoy true stories about courageous individuals who surmount forbidding obstacles to reach their goal. You'll find further inspiration in this biographical film based on the achievements of Billy Mills, a young, penniless, half-Sioux Indian with a dream—to run in the Olympics.

Robby Benson plays Billy, a natural athlete who leaves his home on the reservation to become a track star for Kansas University. Here he faces white bigotry and resentment from the friends he left behind. Torn between two worlds, the young man must decide whether to run—or run away.

When Mills finally enters the 1964 Olympics' grueling 10,000 meter (6.2 miles) event in a borrowed pair of shoes, he is not only struggling to overcome the world's top distance racers, but also his own tormenting self-doubt.

A labor of love, "Running Brave" was produced with the assistance of Billy Mills, who

Wait Till the Sun Shines, Nellie

Movie starring David Wayne

You'll be moved by this simple but dramatic story of a small town barber who struggles to hold on to his dreams in the face of many hardships.

David Wayne stars as the tonsorial artist looking back over 50 years of memories, beginning with his marriage to an ambitious bride. Along the way he loses her, raises their children, experiences business changes, and acquires local honors. "A classic piece of Americana, containing drama and pathos." — Tony Thomas. (109 min.)

BEHIND THE SCENES WITH THE UNDERGRADS

Art Carney and Chris Makepeace, stars of "The Undergrads," show you what it takes to make a movie on location.

You meet them in Toronto, where they're shooting a new made-for-The Disney Channel comedy-drama coming your way next month. It's about a 68-year-old and his grandson who become college freshmen together. Carney takes you along for some between-the-scenes fun, then lets you watch while the cameras are turning. If you think a veteran actor like Art Carney never fluffs a line, wait until you hear his bloopers!

Watch for glimpses of the University of Toronto and such campus landmarks as the Lambda Chi fraternity house; Grad's, a student hangout; and the Flying Monkey Health Food Store, all of which are major settings in the movie.

THE JACKPOT

Movie starring James Stewart, Barbara Hale, James Gleason

Here's what happens after a typical, small-town husband (James Stewart) wins a quiz show jackpot.

As the prizes pour in, his life changes. His household is disrupted by an avalanche of new furniture and appliances, tons of foodstuffs, and such bonus gifts as a Shetland pony. Worst of all, he gets the Internal Revenue Service on his tail. Before this bewildering bonanza finally comes to a laugh-packed halt, our hero is deep in trouble he never dreamed of. (87 min.)

JIMINY CRICKET THEATRE

Movies

You'll love meeting the spunky youngsters in these first-rate international children's movies — and sharing their fun!

A thoroughly modern California girl visits her aging grandmother in Oklahoma and finds her Cherokee heritage in "Ann of the Wolf Clan," starting April 6.

Beginning April 20, a pair of truckers and their kids become "C.B. Heroes." Armed only with quick wits and citizen band radios, they foil the plans of a mean-talking hijacker.

This fast-paced British drama is paired with "A Different Kind of Winning." A young girl is pushed by her father to take first place in a California skateboard tournament, but her concern for a fellow competitor is as great as her desire to succeed.

YOUR CHOICE FOR TOP DOG!

THE UGLY DACHSHUND

Movie starring

Dean Jones, Suzanne Pleshette, Charlie Ruggles

Brutus, the lovable Great Dane with a heart of gold and four left paws, is back in "The Ugly Dachshund." He won your vote as the dog most likely to succeed. "The Shaggy Dog" and "Bristle Face" were runners-up.

It's not poor Brutus's fault that he has an identity crisis—after all, he's been raised with a litter of dainty dachshies and thinks he's one of them. But his larger-than-life physique soon gives him away, while his good-natured gallumphing from one hilarious mishap to another earns him a less-than-hearty welcome from his master's wife. (93 min.)

Perri

Movie

Deep in a great mountain forest a pine squirrel is born. From the safety of a warm, soft nest, she sees a world of wonders to be explored.

Her name is Perri, and this beguiling film is her story. Termed a "True-Life Fantasy" by Walt Disney, it uses documentary photography of animals playing their natural roles to tell a fictional story.

Perri grows, learns to climb, play, forage and protect herself in sequences full of grace, humor and suspense. As she hibernates, her dreams are depicted in an enchanting ballet of animals bounding through a wintry landscape. Awakening, she is courted by a dapper young male named Porro, and the two begin a life together.

A bewitching combination of wildlife photography and evocative music tell this romantic fantasy. The result is as entrancing as the players themselves—an unforgettable glimpse of a secret woodland world and the marvelous ways of its creatures. (74 min.)

MODERN TIMES

Movie starring Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard

Nobody was laughing about the Great Depression of the 1930s except Charlie Chaplin. This time "The Gentleman Tramp" is caught up in the machine age and, as usual, is able to make fun of calamity even when it has reached national proportions.

Charlie is a factory worker who goes crazy after falling into a rolling mill and being force-fed by a labor-saving robot. He loses job after job, finally landing in jail where he is carefree at last. To his chagrin, he's released.

By now he has a girl, as foot-

Einstein

EXCLUSIVE MINISERIES

Albert Einstein uses simple pastimes like kite-flying to teach his pupils scientific principles

Special starring Ronald Pickup, Marie DuBois, Micaela Esdra

Prepare for a fascinating journey into the life and mind of Albert Einstein, a genius whose discoveries changed the world. We're proud to bring you his complete biography in a production as dazzling as its subject. The superb craftsmanship of this four-part series, which brilliantly recreates the physicist's triumphs and tragedies, places it among the best programming ever brought to the television screen. It will entertain and enlighten every member of your family.

The first episode, "Birth of Consciousness," shows young Albert Einstein's (Ronald Pickup) life from age four to 24. As a boy, Albert is so late in learning to speak that his parents fear he is retarded. Soon he reveals his youthful precocity, quickly grasping basic principles of science.

Throughout his years in school, Albert is considered a youthful rebel. He is punished for asserting his Jewishness in a Catholic elementary school, and is suspended from high school when he defies its militaristic discipline. At age 15, he feels driven to renounce his German nationality.

As a college student in Zurich, Switzerland, he alienates his conservative professors with his daring critique of traditional Newtonian physics. When he graduates, not one will accept him as an assistant or write him a recommendation.

Now with no money, no job, and no ability to please the bureaucrats who could help him, the future of this insubordinate young physicist looks bleak.

WILDERNESS BOUND...from Survival Anglia

Series

You've welcomed our new wildlife series with tremendous enthusiasm! We're pleased—but not surprised. Next to Disney, Survival Anglia is the world's major producer of high-quality nature films—so we were determined to get these programs for you Disney Channel viewers. Your appreciation lets us know that all our work has paid off!

"Incredible Castles of Clay" introduces you to the little-known world of the African termite. Orson Welles narrates this Academy Award nominee, which takes you on a tour of the lofty clay castles dotting the plains and bushlands of East Africa. Each of these termite-constructed towers houses millions of the insects.

Filmmaker Alan Root uses special photographic techniques to explore the castles' complex architectural design. He also reveals the sophisticated structure of termite society. You'll learn how the queen termite uses chemical secretions to communicate with her subjects, and see worker termites prepare "dinner" by covering the food

Still The Beaver

Series starring Barbara Billingsley, Tony Dow, Ken Osmond and Jerry Mathers as the Beaver, with Kipp Marcus, John Snee, Kaleena Kiff, Janice Kent, Eric Osmond

The many letters you've sent in suggest that "Still the Beaver" is fast becoming your favorite family comedy series. If you are among the many viewers who value the show's humorous insights into the pleasures—and problems—of parenthood, don't miss the two new episodes premiering this month!

In "Haskells vs. Cleavers," starting April 3, Kip's (Kipp Marcus) Little League team, coached by his dad (Jerry Mathers), must win one more championship game. Then Beaver finds out their opposing team is coached by his old nemesis Eddie Haskell (Ken Osmond), who will stop at nothing to win.

In "The Slumber Party," beginning April 17, Kelly Cleaver (Kaleena Kiff) wants to entertain her elementary school girl friends with a treasure hunt, cartoons, and such popular refreshments as "teeny weenies." But her plans fall apart when two uninvited guests join the festivities: a pet frog and a "sophisticated" 13-year-old with a bag of makeup and hair dye.

Series

Mark every Sunday on your calendar for an at-home evening of TV fun! Invite friends and family to watch the premiere of a new show (which then repeats during the week). Two programs this month are hosted by Walt himself!

"Donald's Weekend," starting April 7, shouldn't happen to a duck! After Walt's prelude, our birdbrain hero goes quackers entertaining his three mischief-making nephews at home, on the golf course and at the circus.

Walt also introduces "The Hound That Thought He Was a Raccoon," beginning April

14. Nubbin, a hound pup, is adopted by a mother raccoon who raises him with Weecha, her one cub. Months later, Nubbin returns to his human owner. He forgets his ring-eyed littermate—until they come face to face in the heat of a coon hunt.

"Baseball Fever," premiering April 21, features an all-star lineup of Disney cartoon characters in a salute to America's most popular spring sport. The laughs never strike out as Goofy gives a fouled-up demonstration of "How to Play Baseball," and "Casey at the Bat" turns his mighty name to mud, among other comical cutups.

"The Tattooed Police Horse" (April 28), is Jolly Roger, a thoroughbred trotter whose habit of breaking stride just before the finish line makes him lose every race. He is sold to a police captain, and becomes a first-class mount—until an accident at a racetrack once again changes his life.

No window is safe when Donald Duck steps up to bat

Series

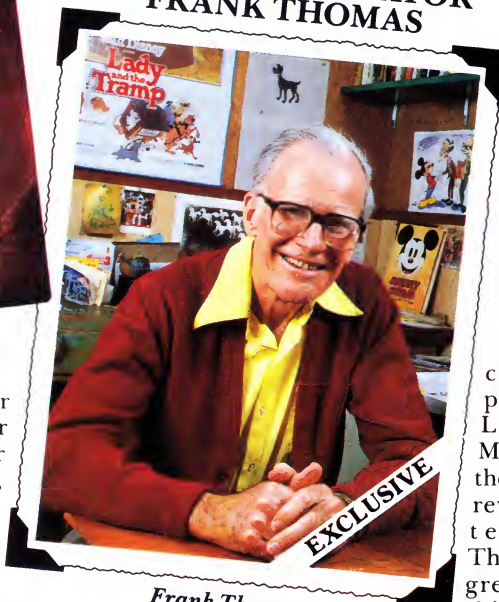

What makes a happy-go-lucky scamp like Pinocchio or a charming lady-killer like Tramp so irresistibly lovable? The answer is Frank Thomas, the veteran Disney animator who put so much of his own heart into his characters that they touch the hearts of all who see them.

Using clips from classic Disney animated films, as well as personal demonstrations, Thomas shows how his strong empathy for cartoon creations made them come alive. For example, when the animator gingerly mounts a horse (for the first time in 30 years!), you'll understand why Ichabod Crane's panicky style of horsemanship looks so authentic!

Ever-sensitive to body language, Thomas points out how people reveal their personality in the way they walk. He used such close observations to give his characters their distinct personalities—

OPEN YOUR HEART TO ANIMATOR FRANK THOMAS

Frank Thomas

Although he credits such early pioneers as Ham Luske and Freddy Moore for creating the first cartoons that reveal emotions and temperaments, Thomas was an equally great innovator. His ability to endow an ink-and-paint drawing with a soul represented a major breakthrough in the art of animation.

A YOUNG "YANK" JOINS THE FIVE MILE FAMILY FIVE MILE CREEK

Series starring

Louise Caire Clark, Rod Mullinar, Liz Burch, Michael Caton, Peter Carroll, Martin Lewis, Gus Mercurio, Nicole Kidman, Shannon Presby, with Jay Kerr as Con Madigan

The love bug bites Annie (Nicole Kidman) in "The Best of Mates," beginning April 3. Hoping to win the heart of romance-shy Jack Taylor (Rod Mullinar), the teenage tomboy tries her hand at cooking and coach driving—with disastrous results!

The wealthy Armstrongs have always won "The Gold Cup" (starting April 17), first prize in Emu Plain's annual horse race. But this year Matt Bucklin (Shannon Presby), a young "Yank" with a new pony express business, plans to give them some stiff competition.

When the Armstrongs set a trap to slow Matt down, he turns to the Five Milers.

Twenty-four-year-old Shannon Presby is the latest addition to the "Five Mile Creek" cast. The boyishly handsome American actor has appeared in such TV shows as "CHiPs," "Diff'rent Strokes" and "Eight is Enough," as well as winning a starring role in the feature film "The New Kids."

Annie plays a crucial game

What does science have to do with sports? Plenty, according to teen twins Tom and Ann Edison (Andrew Sabiston, Marnie McPhail). This month they use their scientific savvy to improve their odds on different playing fields. An animated explanation of the pertinent principles ends each episode.

Annie's at bat in "Bases Loaded—One Girl Out," starting April 6. Her women's baseball league will fold unless she can win the prize for the best sports editorial in a local radio contest. She needs all Tom's help to counter her arch-rival: a young male chauvinist with the delivery of a "mini-Cosell."

When Annie enters the All-City 200 meter race in "Running on Empty," starting April 20, she has a special training aid: a diet supplement invented by brother Tom. Her offer to share the secret is rejected by a fellow runner who's on a dangerously stringent diet. As the day of the race approaches, Annie's time is steadily improving. But she is concerned about her friend, who is getting weaker and weaker.

Welcome To Pooh Corner

Exclusive series

Winnie the Pooh and his pals from the Hundred Acre Wood make learning fun for youngsters. Every episode contains a lesson in living.

In "Pooh Goes Boom," it's the magic of friendship that Eeyore and the others use to show a down-in-the-dumps Pooh that he and his drums are essential to the success of their neighborhood band.

Tigger tries his hand at trickery to get attention in "Now You See It," only to discover that being himself works better.

Daily visits to Pooh's "Thoughtful Spot," plus hummable, memorable tunes, add extra zip to the show.

Series

More stars, more music, more excitement are coming your way as Mickey, Minnie and the gang interpret numbers by top recording artists.

From the big band era of World War II there's "G.I. Blues" by Elvis Presley and "Peppermint Twist" by Joey Dee. Also watch for "My Cherie Amour" by Stevie Wonder and "Try a Little Tenderness" by Otis Redding.

Showing throughout the week. Check listings.

HUCKLEBERRY FINN & HIS FRIENDS

Series starring Ian Tracey, Sammy Snyder, Brigitte Horney, Holly Findlay, Blu Mankuma, Lloyd Berry, Alex Diakun

You Mark Twain fans have plenty to look forward to as we continue this exceptional 26-part series based on his best-known novels.

Huck Finn (Ian Tracey) and Tom Sawyer (Sammy Snyder) are into more mischief than a fox in a chicken coop in each of the half hour episodes airing this month. A new segment premieres on the second and fourth weekends of the month.

Romance blossoms in "The Engagement" (beginning April 13) when Tom professes his love to Becky Thatcher (Holly Findlay). But the light of his life goes out when she discovers he's played the field before.

Desolate, Tom seeks solace by turning to more mundane matters — getting rid of warts. Huck's surefire cure involves a dead cat and a nocturnal graveyard visit in "Mystery at Midnight" (airing April 27). Little do the boys know that their excursion will make them sole witnesses to a dastardly murder committed by the town renegade, Injun Joe (Alex Diakun).

New! ANIMAL WORLD

Series

Pack your curiosity and sense of wonder and travel around the world with ecologist-filmmaker Bill Burrud in search of rare, exotic and endangered wildlife.

From the mysterious Florida Everglades, home of the "Alligator," to "The Great Zoo" in San Diego, Burrud's ever-ready camera and commentary reveal marvelous secrets of the animal kingdom.

GOOD MORNING, MICKEY!

Series

Launch your day by laughing at Mickey and his pals' animated antics on "Good Morning, Mickey! Part 1." Stay shipshape with a "Mousercise" break, then sail ahead for more frivolity with "Good Morning, Mickey! Part 2."

This month Donald tangles with an adversary that's almost as nutty as he is in "The Flying Squirrel," and Goofy battles it out on the basketball court in "Double Dribble."

We're All Ears

Linda Palmer
Subscriber Services Director

Dear Friends,

We're so glad you've joined us as we celebrate our second anniversary. Can you believe it? The Disney Channel will be two years old this month!

I'd like to share my impressions of the past two years. You've sent us some of the most heartfelt letters of gratitude I've ever had the privilege to read. You immediately understood what made The Channel special: its appeal to every member of the family. Then you began sending us your wonderful photos and drawings. We now receive over a thousand a week!

Your questions and comments have helped us change The Channel to better meet your needs. For example, you asked us to produce more made-for-The Disney Channel movies starring favorites like Annette Funicello and Art Carney. We did so. You've asked for more Disney animated specials and features. So, starting in June, we're bringing you a whole summer of animated classics, including "Robin Hood," "Alice in Wonderland" and "The Sword in the Stone."

For all of your suggestions, we thank you. And we're truly proud that you selected The Disney Channel for you and your family.

Sincerely,

Linda

CHEERS FOR THE CHANNEL!

We were raised on Disney, and now, finally, are able to show our three youngsters the superior programming we enjoyed as children. But we're not sure who enjoys the channel more—we or our children! Don't laugh, but even our pets will sit in front of the set and watch the cartoons! We cannot express in words the joy we feel now that we have The Disney Channel. Fantastic!

Mr. & Mrs. David Garret Jr.
Nawark, OH

I'm a 39-year-old single adult living in Los Angeles, and a subscriber to The Disney Channel, writing to say, "Thanks for the memories!"

Your programming could not be more right, when violence and unnecessary sexual situations can be found in even the most innocent of pictures these days—even on television!

A DISNEY CHANNEL CURE FOR HOMESICKNESS

Thanks to The Disney Channel for making us feel at home no matter where we live! My husband's job requires frequent transfers. This year we arrived in Pennsylvania on Thanksgiving, and the children were homesick. Within a few days we had The Disney Channel, and they felt right at home with Mickey, Minnie, and Pooh's Corner!

GOOD NEWS FOR HEARING-IMPAIRED VIEWERS!

Our 11-year-old son is severely deaf. He enjoys your programs immensely. We would appreciate it if you would consider Closed-Captioning some of your programs. I am sure there are many others who would also appreciate it.

J. O. Work
Tulsa, OK

We're happy to let you know that starting in May, we will be providing Closed Captions for a movie every month!

HOW POOH HELPS SLOW SPEAKERS

Last June my doctor told me I should enroll my two-year-old daughter in a speech therapy program if her speech did not improve in a couple of months.

In August we got The Disney Channel. My daughter got hooked on Pooh Corner, and her speech has greatly improved. She knows (and can say) all the names of the characters on Pooh Corner. She can also name all the major Disney cartoon characters. She is making progress—and no therapy is needed. For that I thank The Disney Channel.

Exploring the Archives

Dave Smith established the Walt Disney Archives in 1970. Its collections are as varied as the activities of Walt Disney Productions.

When did Disney make its first educational films? I recall Disney films when I was in school 20 years ago. —K.R., Malibu, CA

Actually, Walt Disney made his first educational film in Kansas City in 1922. It was a dental training film, made for a local dentist, entitled "Tommy Tucker's Tooth." Not until World War II did the Disney Studio get really involved with educational films, producing training films for the military. Out of that evolved a group of postwar educational films for schools, with one of the most popular being "How to Catch a Cold" (1951). Today Walt Disney Productions offers a greatly expanded catalog of films for schools, on a wide range of subjects.

Low spirits & high temp denote a cold

Could you list the movies for which Disney won Academy Awards for Special Effects? —I.S., Evansville, IN

Oscars for Special Effects went to Disney's "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," "Mary Poppins," and "Bedknobs and Broomsticks." Additionally, nominations were received for "The Absent-Minded Professor" and "The Black Hole."

Was there ever a Goofy comic book? —Mrs. H.P., White Plains, NY

There was no regular series of Goofy comics, as there was for Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck, but between 1953 and 1962 there were 16 so-called "one shot" Goofy comics.

How can I find some information about John Clem, from your film "Johnny Shiloh"? —M.C., Brazil, IN Johnny Clem was a real drummer boy during the Civil War; in fact he remained in the army and retired as a brigadier general in 1916. Check your libraries for the book, "Johnny Shiloh" by James A. Rhodes and Dean Jauchius, upon which our film was based.

DISNEY CHANNEL TRIVIA

...For five years after World War II, Walt Disney was unable to raise enough money for a full-length animated feature, so he solved the problem by packaging groups of special short cartoons and featurettes. The first of these postwar packages was "Make Mine Music" (see page 8). It was followed by "Fun and Fancy Free," "Melody Time," and "The Adventures of Ichabod and Mr. Toad."

A squirrel enacts the role of "Perri"

... "Perri" (see page 12) was the first film Walt Disney called a True-Life Fantasy. It differed from earlier True-Life Adventure films in that it followed the story of an individual animal, showing her as a character much like Bambi, and moving the film into the realm of fiction rather than fact.

...In 1976, a modern office building honoring Roy O. Disney was built at the Disney Studio in Burbank. The Archives is one of the departments in that building, which was constructed on the location of a baseball diamond used in "Moochie of the Little League" (see page 11).

THE TIES THAT BIND

In "Running Brave" (April 1, 3, 5, 10, 14, 16, 18, 21, 24, 28, 30), Billy Mills is torn by conflicting loyalties to his Sioux heritage and his dream of being a world-class runner. Some day you may find yourself in a similar difficult situation. What should you do then? Here are some questions to talk over with your family.

1) You have to fill a vacant spot on your softball team. Your closest friend wants the position—but your kid sister, who is equally qualified, asks you to select her. Whom would you pick?

2) You have a circle of chums at the office or school with whom you regularly socialize. Then you begin getting invitations from a more "elite" group. How do you handle the situation?

3) Your parents' fondest dream is for you to be an engineer. You soon find out you have no talent for math—but are a great musician. Which career should you choose?

4) What personal principles or ideals are important to you? What would you do if they came into conflict with the needs of your family, friends, or country?

5) Richard Lovelace, a 17th century English poet, wrote these lines when loyalty to his country separated him from his wife. What does this quote mean to you? "I could not love thee, dear, so much, loved I not honor more."

From "Wilderness Bound"
(April 1, 4, 7, 9, 12, 15, 22, 26, 28)

Did you know?

- Termites have existed for over 100 million years. The closest living relative of the termite is not the ant, but the primitive cockroach.
- There are two groups of termites: the lower group, which is more primitive and the higher group, which is more advanced.
- Primitive termites feed directly on wood and rely on tiny creatures called protozoa living in their digestive tracts to digest food. Higher termites (like those seen on "Wilderness Bound" this month) have a more complicated structure and social organization. They do not depend on wood for food, but also eat hay, leaf litter and soil.
- The members of a termite colony are divided into types called castes:
 - 1) Kings and queens, who lay eggs
 - 2) Soldiers, who protect the nest and
 - 3) Workers, who build and search for food.(Young termites are called nymphs.)
- Termites communicate with chemical secretions and by knocking and rubbing parts of their bodies against hard surfaces. They hear by picking up vibrations through sensitive organs on the front of their legs. They are perfectly attuned to vibrations made by their nest mates' tapping, but cannot pick up other vibrations.
- Although termites are usually considered a destructive force, they play an important ecological role, helping to decompose and recycle plant litter.

JIMINY CRICKET'S EGGSQUISITE INTERNATIONAL EGGS!

On his travels, Jiminy's discovered many traditional ways people in different countries decorate eggs. He wants to share some of them with you.

GENERAL PREPARATIONS

1) Wash as many white eggs as you need. 2) Poke a small hole at both ends of each egg with a needle. (Ask an adult to help.) 3) Hold the egg over a clean bowl and blow to remove the insides. Run water through the egg shell and dry. 4) After decorating, ask an adult to spray the eggs with a fixative (found in hardware or art supply stores) to prevent smudging.

United States

Pennsylvania Dutch Patchwork Eggs

1) Cut an assortment of fabric scraps into 1" x 1" pieces. 2) Spread white glue over a small section of the egg. Press a fabric piece onto the glued area and smooth with a damp sponge. 3) Continue adding fabric, overlapping the edges of each piece until the egg is covered. Spray with fixative.

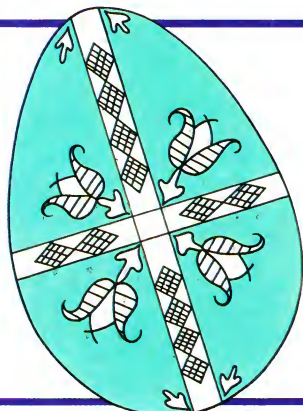

England

Pace Eggs

1) Peel enough onion skins to fill a medium sized plastic bag. Put the skins in an enamel pot and cover with water until the pot is about $\frac{3}{4}$ full. Bring the water to a boil, then simmer for an hour to make a dye. After cooling, strain the dye to remove the skins. Pour the dye back into the pot. 2) Cut an old stocking crosswise into 6" sections. 3) Place small fresh flowers or leaves face down against an egg. Hold them in place and slip the egg into a piece of stocking. Gather the ends, pull tight and tie. 4) Place a few eggs at a time into the dye and simmer for 30 minutes. Remove, let cool, then unwrap.

(Ask an adult to help with this one.)

Czechoslovakia

Painted Eggs

1) Paint eggs black, brown or dark shades of blue, green and red. 2) Slip a wide rubber band crosswise or lengthwise around the egg and trace around it to mark off areas. (The banded area traditionally represents continual life.) Remove the rubber band. Sketch designs like the ones shown here. 3) Paint your designs with light-colored paints.

Goofy's Foolish April Jokes and Riddles

(Hold up to a mirror to read.)

What's better than a good joke? In honor of April Fools' day, your Disney Channel pals thought up these teasers, ticklers and puzzlers.

JOKES AND RIDDLES

Minnie Mouse: Why did Mickey take a trip to outer space?

Daisy Duck: I give up, why?

Minnie Mouse: He wanted to find Pluto!

Donald Duck: What goes up in the air white and comes down yellow and white?

Goofy: You've got me!

Donald Duck: An egg!

Louie: If everybody in the United States drove a pink car, what would you call this country?

Huey & Dewey: Can't guess!

SILLY TALK

Here's a silly secret language to share with your pals. Just rop he irst etter f very ord n a entence. (Drop the first letter of every word in a sentence.) Practice with this nonsense poem.

Moses supposes his toeses are roses,
But Moses supposes erroneously.
For nobody's toeses are posies of roses
As Moses supposes his toeses to be.

*oses upposes is oeses re oses,
ut oses upposes rroneously.
